

Remarks:

The examiner's comments and arguments have been carefully noted and the new Kresse reference carefully studied.

The decision of the Board in the previous appeal was that the reference applied did not make obvious the combination of a separately moveable bucket and trolley that could be connected together. The present art does not negate that.

The issue appears to center around the separate bucket 12 of Kresse having wheels thereon; it does, and it is movable in the sense that it can be skidded over a floor surface. It only has a single set of wheels and without attachment to the trolley, the bucket and bucket support falls to the floor at the end without wheels.

That is not what is and has been intended by applicant and the amendment to Claim 1 provides for front and rear sets of wheels. That change clearly distinguishes the claimed combination from Kresse '454.

With this last change, the Claim 1 should be allowed.
